Johnny the Gingerbread Man

Once there lived an old woman in a wooden house. She didn't have any children but she had two brothers. The lady wanted to have a little baby. Her husband told her to make a small boy from gingerbread. She thought it was a good idea. The woman went to the market and bought some flour. Then she made some dough and shaped it like a little man. But without a face and clothes it didn't look like a baby. So she took two blueberries and made him eyes, put one grape for his nose and a toffee in place of a mouth. She made his jacket from biscuits and decorated it with white wavy lines of sugar coating. After that she put him into the oven and baked. And at last it was ready — her small gingerbread man. The woman was happy! Now they had a son. She named him Johnny. And everybody in their village called him Johnny the Gingerbread Man.
